

Going to a Play

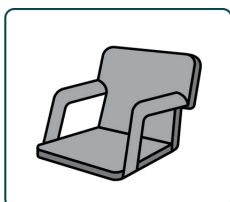

I am going to a play!

A play is a live performance.
I will see actors in costumes.

The actors will pretend to be characters. They will sing, and dance on a stage.

I will have my own seat near my family or friends.

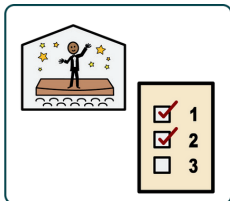

I can sit in my seat and enjoy the show!

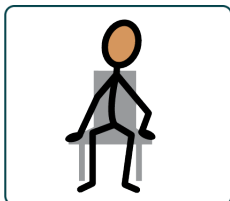

Rules During a Play

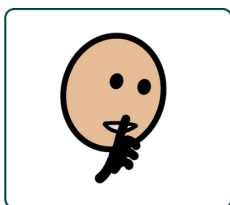

There are rules at the play to help the actors and to keep everyone safe.

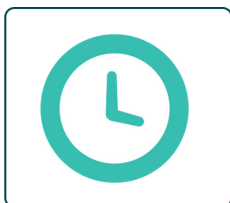

There are three BIG rules during the play:

Rule # 1 : I will stay in my seat during the show.

Rule # 2 : I will keep my voice quiet during the show.

Rule # 3 : I will ask for a break if I need one.

The Aristocats: What to Expect

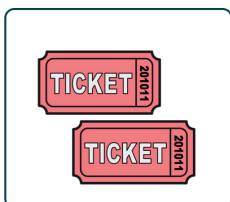

The play I will see is the Aristocats Kids.

The play is at Sheboygan Lutheran High School.

We will drive to the play and we will park our vehicle.

We will walk inside to the lobby.

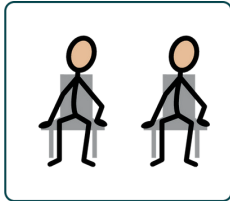

We will show the workers our tickets.

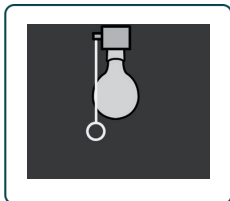

They will give us a packet with information about the play and the actors.

I can walk around the lobby, find the bathrooms, and walk inside the theater before the show starts.

The Aristocats: What to Expect

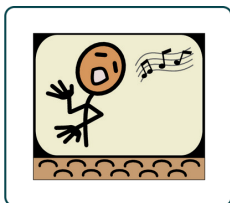

When the show starts, we have to sit in our seats.

The room will get darker when it's time for the show to start.

The play director will walk on the stage and tell the audience about the play.

Then the play will start!

There will be music, dancing, and singing.

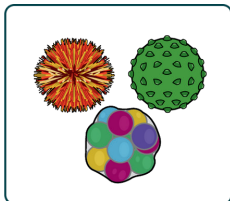

Some actors might walk through the aisles.

People will clap their hands to say "good job."

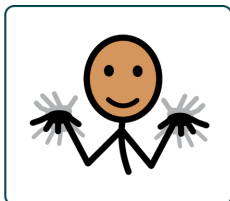

The Aristocats: What to Expect

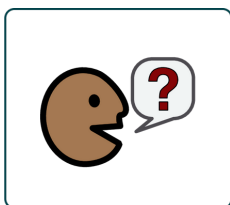

If it's too loud, I can cover my ears or use noise-cancelling headphones.

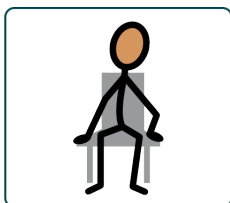

I can use my sensory tools like fidgets, squishies, or a device as long as it stays on silent.

I can bounce in my chair, tap my feet, and clap or flap my hands - as long as I'm not too loud.

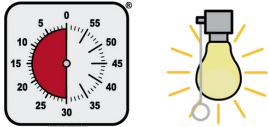

If I need a break, I can ask to go to the break space.

When I'm ready, I can go back to my seat and finish watching the play.

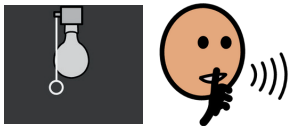

The Aristocats: What to Expect

Everyone will get a break during half-time or intermission. The lights will turn on. Some people will stay in their seats. Others will go to the lobby.

They might use the bathroom.
They might buy a snack from the snack sale to eat.

Then, the show will start again. We will return to our seats. The lights will go off, and everyone will be quiet.

At the end of the play, the actors will all return to the stage to take a "bow" and be celebrated. People will clap to say "good job."

After the play people will leave their seats and go to the lobby. Some people will leave, and others will stay and take pictures or say "good job" to the actors.

Going to a play is fun!
